CONTROVERSIAL!

103 PEDAGOGICAL IMPLICATIONS

The primary goal of this book is to provide a comprehensive overview of the current state of research on the use of case endings in Spoken Standard Arabic. The findings of this book may inform teaching. These points are based on the assumption that Spoken Standard Arabic is a prescriptive ideal and that appropriate forms of the language are those of Standard Arabic. It entails partial abandonment of the prescriptive ideal and turns against commonly held notions of linguistic correctness in Arabic.

It is assumed here that oral proficiency in Standard Arabic is a necessary condition for the acquisition of the written form of the language.
